

WORKING HOLIDAY VISA FACT SHEET

- Working Holiday Visa holders can work for any employer in Australia, but there is a limitation of up to six months with a single employer. The primary purpose of the Working Holiday Visa is to allow participants to holiday and work in Australia, rather than to establish a long-term career.
- Visa holders are permitted to work for any employer in Australia, including casual, part-time, or full-time positions. Visa holders can work in a wide range of industries, such as hospitality, tourism, agriculture, retail, administration, and more.
- Skilled short-term employees are in high demand in Australia, in industries including accounting, finance, IT, and office support due to temporary roles being created that require flexibility, quick integration, and specialised skills
- Partnering with a recruiter for advice and to launch your temporary-work career can be extremely beneficial due to their large networks and wealth of knowledge, and will take the stress out of finding work in a new country
